About the Queen's Awards:

The Queen's Awards for Enterprise are the UK's highest official accolades for business success. Operating in various forms since 1966, they recognise UK businesses for outstanding achievement in one of three categories: International Trade, Innovation and Sustainable Development. Entrants come from all parts of the UK, from city-located centres of commerce to the remotest of locations, and include organisations involved in a wide range of industries and sectors.

All entrants are evaluated by an advisory committee composed of industry groups, trade unions and government officials. Awards are made on the advice of the Prime Minister, and announced by HM The Queen on her birthday each year.
